Comments : Thanks for allowing an anonymous person to speak. I am sorry for not wanting to be "public" but I literally feel that a person's opinion about such an item as this ought to be private and offered in the voting booth! I do not want to hate my neighbors, but I do, because I think they are bossy-butt idiots. They are bump advocates; working hard for our community as they see it. IMHO they are in fact just forcing their self serving opinion on others.

I once was driving pre bump past what is now a bump front property. My sister, who had had surgery that morning and whom I was bringing to my home from Swedish, lay weak and sick in the front seat trying to hold it together for another mile. I was going a shocking 32 miles an hour (in a 25 zone) about a block past the store when a homeowner checking her mail screeched at my moving car SLOW DOWN!!! as if I was going 70 or something. My thought was what a jerk, she needs to get a life.

A few days later my husband was treated to a similar factor as the same woman dramatically put her hands palm down and gestured in sweeping down movements slow down as if she was traffic safety. He was going 30.

We thought to ourselves that this was dumb, a couple of dogs died because the owners did not keep them out of the road and suddenly we have a 'dangerous road' on our hands with vigilante groups taking things into their own hands. Signs appeared on our road saying "Two dogs DEAD. Slow Doown!" as well as a homemade sandwich board style sign saying 25 mph.

Good lord I thought, what's the big deal. This road is slow. Are there occasional speeders? yes of course. Are they really awful compared to other areas? no not at all. I was comfortable in the knowledge that this is not the old west and a posse cannot be got up to racketeer the rest of us to comply with some one persons vision of the law---or so I thought. I had no idea the GHAAC could wield such power.

Can we get an initiative on the ballot that says "shall the bumps be removed and shall the GHAAC be dissolved" and we can all vote on that.
